Zapata Quantum CEO Sumit Kapur Named to Boston Business Journal's 2026 Power 50: Movement Makers

Recognition reflects a successful ground-up restructuring that positions the Harvard spinout to extend its legacy of leadership in closing the quantum applications gap

BOSTON, Massachusetts – September 15, 2026 – Zapata Quantum (OTCQB: ZPTA) (“Zapata,” “Zapata Quantum” or the “Company”), a leader in quantum computing algorithm and application development, today announced that its CEO, Sumit Kapur, has been selected by The Boston Business Journal for the publication’s annual Power 50: Movement Makers.

The Boston Business Journal chooses honorees who are cultivating positive and impactful changes in business, economic prosperity and community well-being in Greater Boston. Honorees were selected through nominations from the community and the publication’s own editorial team.

“I am honored to be recognized alongside so many outstanding leaders in Boston,” said Kapur. “The credit belongs to the entire Zapata Quantum team and reflects the long arc of innovation that began in Harvard’s quantum computing lab and The Engine built by MIT.”

“Having spent my formative years on Harvard’s campus, I’ve seen firsthand Boston’s position as a hub for advanced technology and spinouts from academia, and we are proud to be a part of that tradition as we continue to build the tools that help organizations close the quantum applications gap, especially as quantum hardware is advancing faster than the applications that will run on it,” Kapur added.

In the last two years, Kapur has seen Zapata through a successful restructuring and repositioning around its original focus to advance the discovery, development and deployment of quantum software applications. As part of that effort, Zapata rebuilt its team around original leadership from Harvard’s quantum computing lab while adding experienced talent from companies including Palantir, Oracle and Northrop Grumman, combining deep quantum expertise with enterprise software and commercialization experience.

During Kapur’s tenure, Zapata has collaborated with NVIDIA, using agentic AI to accelerate quantum algorithm discovery. The Company’s quantum-enabled drug discovery research with Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, the University of Toronto and Insilico Medicine was also recognized as one of Nature Biotechnology’s Top 10 Papers of 2025, reflecting Zapata’s longstanding scientific leadership and contribution to Boston’s biotechnology research community.

“I’ve served on Zapata’s board since its earliest days, and the past year has been the most consequential stretch in the company’s history,” said Clark Golestani, Chairman of the Board of Directors at Zapata. “Under Sumit’s leadership, the company has been rebuilt around its core strengths, added exceptional talent and deepened relationships with industry leaders like NVIDIA, IBM and QuEra. With momentum building across quantum computing, Zapata is exceptionally well positioned to capture the opportunity emerging at the intersection of advancing quantum hardware and application development.”
